Sandrina Stevens

Sometimes it takes many strange twists of circumstances and events to lead a person toward the attainment of her station in life. Oftentimes one has to be "the right person, at the right time, in the right place" in order to fulfill a dream or reach a set goal. In Sandrina's case the Goddesses of Fate, Good Fortune and Feminine Charm seem to have concerted their efforts to carve out a path to her future!

A veritable maze of circumstances preceded Sandrina's choice of her, now successful, career in modeling. It sounds like a travelogue or a lesson in geography, but here she is ... the product of a father of Afro-American ancestry and a mother descendant of a family of Camargue in Southern France ... and American girl living and working in Denmark.

Her Father: An officer in the U.S. Army Landing in Southern France with a detachment of expeditionary forces in 1944, wounded in action, billeted in a field Lazaretta staffed by French volunteer nurses.

Her Mother: Native of the Camargue region of France, was one of those nurses at the time — a teen-age, beauteous, "Samaritaine", full of lofty ideals and devotion to a common cause.

From here on the string of events unfolds, like a "normal war-time pocket novel", perhaps "corny" in its content, but nevertheless having important consequences where Sandrina's present life is concerned.

The American officer, after his convalescence, married the French nurse. She returned to the States with him as a G.I. war bride. Two years later, Sandrina was born.

Although she grew up like millions of other American youngsters in a midwestern atmosphere, with all the aspects of every day life in America, her interests and ways of thinking developed with a flair for adventure. She thought of "her world" as something more far-reaching than her home town. If only by heredity, she acquired cosmopolitan likes and dislikes, and a broadness of mind with a focus on things international rather than provincial.

In High School her proficiency and achievements in French earned her a trip to France as an exchange student at age

16. She accepted the challenge for a stay of 3 months. Her parents, not to be outdone by their offspring (by the way, their only child born of that marriage) decided to take a trip to Europe at the end of Sandrina's sojourn, in order to re-visit old familiar places with Sandrina ... places which played such important parts in their lives ... and they had mentioned so often in their reminiscences to Sandrina.

They not only travelled in France, but also visited Italy, Germany and Denmark. And here again Fate, or a stroke of luck intervened in the life of Sandrina.
